In the past, applicants were required to visit a law enforcement facility, be fingerprinted with ink and paper and wait 6-8 weeks for the background check results. Today, the technology of Live Scan equipment, consisting of a sophisticated scanner and personal computer, is able to collect fingerprint images in a digital format and submit the applicant's information electronically to the appropriate state or federal law enforcement agency. That agency conducts the criminal history background check and provides the requesting agency, whether it be a school or a licensing agency, with the results of the background check. Background check results are returned in the matter of days, not weeks.
